Security Scenarios

You are one of seven security guards contracted for security at a rock concert. Approximately 1000 people are in attendance. The concert is being held in an open area with a stage set up. A cyclone fence surrounds the concert area. You observe two male subjects climbing over the fence to gain entry into the concert area.

What are you going to do?

You are a security guard assigned to prevent “problems” at a convenience store. Your areas of responsibility include the inside of the store and the parking lot. You observe four males arguing in the parking lot. They are about to engage in fighting.

What are you going to do?

You are a security guard at a large manufacturing plant that employs 200 employees. Your duties are to prevent thefts, report unsafe conditions or hazards. Your employer has also requested you to quell any disturbances that may occur. Your employer has just laid off 12 workers due to downsizing for economic reasons. Six of the employees left the plant without incident. The remaining six employees refuse to leave and are causing a disturbance and interfering with other employees. Your supervisor tells you to arrest them for trespassing.

What are you going to do?

You are a security guard working for a mortgage company that employs 25 people. A client of the business is arguing with one of the employees. The client is threatening to go get a gun and return to “blow the employee’s head off”.

What are you going to do?

You are a security guard at a medical clinic. An obvious homeless man walks into the lobby area and sits down in a chair. The man’s appearance and odor is disturbing patients in the lobby area. The man did not check in at the reception desk and obviously does not have business being there.

What are you going to do?

Striking employees are picketing outside of the business that you have been employed by as a security guard. The striking employees are carrying picket signs and yelling, loudly, derogatory remarks about the business. One of the striking employees picks up a bull horn and begins to incite the striking employees into some sort of action that may cause damage to the business property.

What are you going to do?